Become a Peer Reviewer for JMSR !

Journal of Medical and Surgical Research is an open access peer-reviewed medical journal listed in Web of Science. Reviewers are critical to the editorial and publishing process, impacting the credibility of the journal through evaluation of the quality, merit and the relevance of submitted papers. Due to the high number of papers under consideration, JMSR is seeking peer reviewers with expertise in all medical and surgical fields and in statistics and research methodology to support and enhance the current editorial process.

Reviewer benefits are:

- Electronic professional platform that may contribute to promotion and tenure decisions.
- Free priority track peer-review process for submitted papers.
- Academic visibility (JMSR is freely available for both authors and readers).
- Recognition for peer review contributions through journal's page in Publons.
- If needed, JMSR Certificate of peer-review activity

Reviewer commitments include:

- Return manuscripts with comments and first decision in a timely manner, typically within two weeks' time maximum.
- Keep confidential manuscripts under review and information within the manuscript;
- Accept reviewing the first revision of the manuscript for which he/she provided the initial review.

If you are interested in serving as a reviewer for JMSR, please register in: <https://www.journal-jmsr.net/registration.php> and e-mail us in jofmedicalandsurgicalresearch@gmail.com, and kindly include the following attachments in a PDF form:

- An updated curriculum vitae with a link to Google scholar or Researchgate page.
- A list of areas of expertise that will help assign convenient articles for appropriate review.
- A brief statement outlining previous peer review activity or editorial experience.
